Arlington Beardless Winter Barley

Recently introduced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and has so many advantages over common winter barley that it promises to supersede it over the South as a grain and forage crop. Is entirely free of beards or awns—will mature a month earlier than wheat if sown in September—makes an excellent nurse crop for clovers—will grow taller than the ordinary Winter Barley and will yield as high as 60 bushels per acre. We believe that seed of this variety will be in good demand for several years at high prices—and that a number of our farmers will find it profitable to grow this strain for Commercial Seed purposes.

Our stock now in transit—price
Bu. $3, Half Bu. $1.75, Peck $1.

We are headquarters for Seed Rye, Barley, Seed Wheat, Alfalfa, Clovers, Vetch, Rape, Seed Oats. If it is seed of high quality you want to visit or phone 464.

Of Interest To Women

By Sarah M. Trescott.

THE OUT-DOOR LIVING ROOM

After the heat and stress of the day, and the enclosing walls of house and office, what is more restful, and refreshing than spending the late afternoon, and evening hours in the open air, and how much more delightful when these hours are spent in your own garden, surrounded by your own flowers, shrubs and trees? I know of no more genuine pleasure, than having a piece of ground, no matter how small, of your very own, to plant and arrange as it suits you. The delight of finding that your trees are rooted, that your hedge is really growing, and seeds are coming up, recur year after year, the keen edge of the joy is never dulled, and when after weeks of cheerful labor things gradually take shape, the middle distance of green lawn, the hedge of flowering shrubs, and the corners of bright blossoms, meets your delighted eyes, the blessed sense of ownership comes unalloyed happiness. Now add some benches, and rockers, and a low table, strong stout material that can stand the weather; paint them dark green, and group under, or near a tree, and your outdoor living room is complete. Sitting there in the cool of the evening, the kindly hedge shielding you from the curious public, the soft green of the lawn resting your tired eyes, the exquisite tints of flowers, and leaf, the freshness of air, and the wide expanse of sky overhead soothing your weary mind, and resting your nerves, you are happy yourself, and at peace with the world. You see so many neglected yards, that could be made into charming gardens, and out-door living rooms, if people were only a little less careless, and had a little more energy. Many say they cannot afford it, which simply means that it is too much trouble, as any able bodied man or woman, can have a lovely bit of lawn, shrubs, and flowers, at really very little expense. But you must love the open, and have energy, perseverance and enthusiasm, and you will be more than repaid with the pleasure you will get from that small piece of earth. One of the most valuable and beautiful hedges in the world is the English hawthorn, yet the ignorance, or stupidity of the people have nearly exterminated it in this country, here and there on a terrace, or in a pasture you can still find a small bush of it. Dig it up carefully, and carry it home, every piece you find, and you will have a hedge that is a beauty, and a joy forever. Growing densely, and being very thorny, it forms an impenetrable hedge, it is an evergreen, and in May is covered with delicate white blossoms, and in the fall, and far into the winter months it is a glowing mass of orange berries.

In putting out a California privet hedge, let me advise buying the roots from the same section in which you live. They thrive more, and make a better hedge, than if you send off for them, those from a distance may be a little cheaper but they take longer to grow, and require greater care. If you have not got an out of door living room, make one, begin now, work at it all winter, have it ready for occupancy next morning. You will enjoy the summer more than you ever thought possible.

"THE CLASS OF FASHION"

Two of the very smartest dresses I have seen are for school girls. In navy blue, or black French serge, one was a "Country Club" model trimmed with black silk braid, and covered with novelty buttons, the waist was the coat effect, with three rows of black silk braid on coat and sleeves, patent leather belt, white faille silk collar, skirt with gored open front, trimmed with three rows of the braid.

The other, was the popular "Fad-mare", a piece model in navy blue French serge, fastened in front, with collar and belt of same material, while silk over collar, fastened with small velvet bow. The skirt was plaited from a yoke. Plain bone buttons on waist and sleeves completed the very fetching, and charmingly useful costume.

The sweaters are more fashionable than ever, and come in lovely shades of rose, canary, and wisteria in what they call fibre silk. They are of unusual length, with belts that tie in front, the long ends finished with tassels.

The tailored silk blouses are fascinating in their simplicity, though the latest thing in smartness. They are to be had in either radium silk, in china blue, or rose color, with pearl buttons or crepe de chine in white.

Those who cannot afford to buy them from the exclusive high priced shops can easily copy them, if they are versed in needle craft, and can do good machine work. So many women are careless in that very thing, they take pains with hand work putting regular stitches that are beautiful to see, but set them at a machine, and they race madly along, leaving a chain of loose stitches that not only is very detrimental to the looks of the garment, being made, but is inconspicuously careless. Neatness in finish is the sign of a good needle woman.

A word about the corduroy suits that are to be used so much this winter, for this section of country, and climate nothing more suitable could be found.

The one I have in mind is the "Cross Country" model in brown, or dark green corduroy, with the three-quarter length, belted coat, shaped yoke back and front, gaudier effect cuffs, bone buttons, and detachable high collar of fur. The skirt is a full circular one with patch pockets, and belt of same material.

WAR MAY RESULT IN CHAMPAGNE FAMINE

Paris, Aug. 27.—(Associated Press Correspondence).—Pink champagne, or even red, is a threatened possibility as a result of the war, unless the winegrowers of the champagne district are helped out by white wine growers of other regions. The glass works of northern France and of Belgium that have furnished wine growers of the champagne district are short of casks—more than half of last year's vintage being still in the wood. The use of casks from the Burgundy and Bordeaux red-wine regions has been proposed, and if this suggestion is taken up there are chances that the cru of 1915 will be pink. It would be impracticable to thoroughly cleanse the red-wine casks of their color, and it is said that the reddish color would in no wise harm the champagne.

The "Mountains of Rheims" where the champagne is produced have, like the "Heights of the Meuse" disappeared from the official communiqué. The steady pressure from the French side of the fighting line disengaged, finally the last of the important champagne vineyards, though those of St. Thierry and Harmonville to the north of the river Vesle are right next to the trenches, and those on the northern slope of the enemy's artillery. Notwithstanding all the difficulties the 25,000 acres of the Champagne district will produce one-third more wine than last year, bringing the total to the normal average before the war.

Inexperienced women and children, guided by old wine-growers, did the pruning between January 15 and the end of March. Women also fought the mildew, and, altogether, succeeded so well that the war difficulties will have had far less influence on the crop than the vine diseases that prevailed four years ago and prevented the formation of the fruit, or than the inundations of 1910.

For the gathering of the crop more trouble is anticipated than last year. After the battle of the Marne there were a great many refugees in the champagne country, who helped with the vintage. These have been evacuated since. Moreover the authorities hesitate to allow women and children to expose themselves any longer on the northern slope of the "Mountains of Rheims" where they are liable any day to be caught by a stray shell. Leave will doubtless be given to a sufficient number of wine-growers under arms to do this work, as well as the operation of the 600 wine presses in the department of the Marne, requiring each five men during a period of fifteen days.

The commercial importance of the champagne country to France appears from the latest figures available, those of 1914. Of the total production of fine wines, valued at $11,000,000, the champagne district produced $15,000,000, the rest coming from the Burgundy and Bordeaux regions principally. One of the best customers for the fine wines of France was Germany, who bought $6,600,000 worth a year; surpassed only by Great Britain, who took $7,750,000 worth, with Belgium coming next with $6,750,000. France has, accordingly, for the time being lost an outlet for wines to the amount of $13,350,000 annually. The United States, with purchases of $2,100,000 a year, was the poorest customer, next to Russia, who bought less than a million dollars worth of French wine annually.

"You need him around the farm?"

"Then why do you need him?"

"The hired man's puttin' on so much airs ther isn't hardly no livin' with him. Josh is the only person that ever came around here that kin beat him playin' checkers."
